Husband, wife arrested following burglary tips

By Steve Marschke

Police have arrested another pair of suspects in a string of rural burglaries in West Sacramento's Southport neighborhood. The husband-and-wife pair have been charged with parole violations, and officers are attempting to match property recovered from their home with items reported missing from the burglaries.

Sgt. Rick Mayoral of the West Sacramento said that publicity surrounding the burglaries helped lead the police to the new suspects.

"We developed some leads with the help of your paper," he told a News-Ledger reporter. "It led us to some people, and we found out they were on parole. We arrested them on parole violations and there is a lot of property we've taken in from them."

Police hoped to contact burglary victims beginning today to try to determine if any of the clothing, power equipment and electrical equipment they recovered has come from the Southport burglaries. Mayoral said a number of guns have also been stolen, but that only two guns were recovered and both appear unrelated to the burglaries.

Arrested Tuesday without incident were Maria Emery and Gregory Emery, whose ages Mayoral gave as approximately 38 and 42, respectively. Both were assigned to parole in Sacramento but had been staying in West Sacramento, he said.

"They have been seen in the areas of these burglaries," he added. "The vehicle they drive has been identified. The female has been identified as being at the residence of one home which was burglarized. It was not burglarized that day, but the next day."

Workshop on Broderick is planned for this evening

The West Sacramento city government is holding a workshop this evening at the Turner Branch Library inviting community input as a preliminary step in the writing of a community development plan for the old Broderick neighborhood. The plan will be known as the Washington Specific Plan.

The San Francisco consulting firm, PBR--who also developed the Southport Framework Plan--has been hired on an 18 month, $262,000 contract to develop a specific plan and an Environmental Impact Report for the area. PBR representatives will be on hand to listen to the concerns of residents and landowners before they begin to design the plan.

The neighborhood in question is a 190 acre area bordered by the Sacramento River to the east, West Capitol Avenue to the south, 8th Street to the west, and A Street to north. It includes the Raley's landing area and ends on the south side near Lighthouse Marina.

City spokesperson Terry Roberts expressed a desire to hear specifically from people from the neighborhood. "I would like to see business owners and residents come. We already know what the developers want," she said.

Although the plan has not been developed yet, the city has the general idea that it should remain an undivided neighborhood, and that the offices that will be a part of Raley's landing should open out onto 3rd Street, and not merely face the river.

Some landowners in the area showed some discomfort at a prior meeting with city staff because of a past bad experience in an attempt to develop the area. In the early 1980s, before the city incorporated, landowners hired a consultant in cooperation with the county government to study the neighborhood and develop the Washington Area Re-use Plan.

One of the conclusions reached in that study was that a redevelopment district should be formed to help fund improvements to the neighborhood. When the city incorporated, the newly formed government dismissed the consulting firm hired

Cultivating excellence

Harold and Virginia Turner stand in front of their Mosswood Circle home (near Park Blvd.) with the plaque they were awarded July 20 by the West Sacramento City Council.

The couple were honored with a "Beauty in Progress" civic award recognizing the beautiful, luxurious flowering garden they have cultivated. Virginia Turner is the true gardener of the pair, they report.

"I mow the lawn," jokes husband Harold.

The award was jointly sponsored by the West Sacramento Redevelopment Agency and the West Sacramento Parks and Community Services Department.

Four other property owners also received citations for improving their properties.

A West Capitol Avenue restaurant, El Mariachi Taqueria (which was the feature of an earlier News-Ledger article), received recognition.

Another West Capitol Avenue restaurant, McDonalds, was honored for site improvements.

Merkley Plaza landowners Hanson Wong and Jim Coulter were recognized for the sidewalk and landscape improvements they have made to their property.

And Jackie Nichols received an award for renovation and remodeling performed on property on Riverbank Road.

Local eight-year old is killed by passing car

By Steve Marschke

Police are still trying to determine the cause of an accident last Wednesday afternoon in which an eight-year old boy was killed by a passing vehicle on Todhunter Way.

The boy, Michael Jackson Alvarez, was evidently playing near the street while waiting in line for an ice cream truck near his Bryte neighborhood home in West Sacramento's northwestern area. He was struck by a pickup truck driven by Jeremy Gulick, 18, who resides in Sacramento.

"All we know is the child ran out into the roadway and was hit by a vehicle," said Officer Rich Monroy of the West Sacramento Police Department. "There was no alcohol involved with the driver, no drugs. We're trying to determine if speeding or anything else was a factor."

Gulick's vehicle was headed southbound on Todhunter near Drew St. when the accident occurred. He has not been charged with any wrongdoing, pending the outcome of a traffic investigation. Monroy emphasized that Gulick may be found blameless in the accident.

After being struck, Alvarez was transported to the UCD Medical Center, where he was pronounced dead after the 3:05 p.m. accident.

Monroy said investigators are still trying to piece together accounts of the accident from witnesses, and that although the boy was reportedly among friends waiting in line for an ice cream truck, no such truck was at the scene when officers arrived.

High-speed chase

A 25-year old Sacramento man was arrested after a car he was a passenger in led police on a high-speed chase from West Sacramento's Yolo Street to Grand Avenue in Sacramento.

The incident began last Wednesday when West Sacramento police responded to the report of a possible drive by shooting on Yolo Street. They spotted a suspect vehicle, which led officers in pursuit.

After it was stopped in Sacramento, the driver fled. Passenger Michael Otis Williams was apprehended.

The vehicle was determined to be stolen, and three bullet holes were found in the side.

Williams was booked for possession of stolen property, and police are still investigating the incident.

U.S., Japanese feud over rice purchasing agreement

By David Weller

Congressman Vic Fazio has introduced a resolution in the House of Representatives accusing the Japanese government of backing out of an agreement to buy 75,000 metric tons of California rice. Senator Diane Feinstein is expected to introduce the same resolution in the Senate this week.

"My resolution puts Congress clearly on record that when the Japanese make a deal with the United States, we expect them to follow through. Further, it puts the Japanese government on notice that we will not tolerate any backtracking on other trade agreements we have reached with Japan," Fazio was quoted in a recent press release.

The Japanese Food Agency issued a statement on Tuesday that it has fulfilled all of its contractual obligations to buy imported rice during 1993 and 1994.

Because of food shortages caused by severe weather conditions last year, the Japanese government was forced to make emergency agreements to purchase rice from China, Australia, Thailand, and the United States. A large portion of the U.S rice comes from California's central valley.

'When the Japanese make a deal with the United States, we expect them to follow through.'

-- Congressman Vic Fazio

In December of 1993, as a provision of the Uruguay round of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), Japan also made a long-term commitment to gradually open its rice import markets.

According to information from Fazio's office, the Japanese Food Agency entered into an agreement with the United States late last year to buy 644,000 metric tons of U.S. rice during 1993 and 1994.

The U.S. rice industry "undertook great measures to buy back inventory to ensure that all 644,000 tons of rice was available for shipment to Japan," according to Fazio's press release. In June, the Japanese agency announced that they were terminating the emergency program, leaving the U.S. rice industry with 75,000 tons of rice it had not yet shipped.

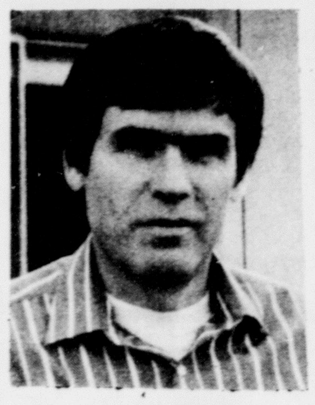

Of that 75,000 tons of rice, about 60,000 tons were due to be provided by the California Rice Cooperative (CRC), which is based in West Sacramento and ships through the Port of Sacramento. The remaining 15,000 tons were to come from the Comet Cooperative which is located in Northern California and ships through the Port of Stockton. A representative from CRC could not be reached for comment.

The Japanese Food Agency disagrees with Fazio's interpretation of the agreement, and issued a statement through their consulate in San Francisco defending their actions. According to the agency, contractual agreements with the United States were not finalized until June of 1994, and included only 590,000 tons of U.S. rice. The agreement did not include any commitment

Rwanda tragedy: lessons from a second lieutenant

My Back Pages

By Daryl Fisher

by Daryl Fisher

The latest news from Rwanda, Africa, is that thousands of refugees are now dying daily from a cholera epidemic which is rapidly spreading throughout the French humanitarian zones and the numerous other encampments which have been hastily set up to care for the hundreds of thousands of displaced men, women and children whohave fled the genocide going on in their homeland.

For more months than I care to count, the world sat by as Hutus (Rwanda's majority ethnic group) slaughtered - mostly with machetes - maybe as many as a half million of the Tutsi ethnic minority. Now that the Rwandan Patriotic Front (which is controlled by the Tutsi) has regained control of the country, the Hutus are spilling over their country's boarders in incredible numbers and filling up disease-riddled refugee camps, fearing that the Tutsi will soon begin to avenge the massacre of their own people.

Mass graves are everywhere, exhausted relief workers are starting to burn the stacks of dead in an effort to contain the spread of disease, and at the last count, more than a million sick, hungry and thirsty human beings are in desperate need of assistance from the outside world.

The other night, after forcing myself to view an hour-long television news program on all the human misery and dying which is going on in Rwanda, I found myself recalling a long ago conversation I had with an Army second lieutenant I met shortly after I got back from Vietnam. We were both stationed in a place called Fort Meade, Maryland, where he was in charge of a platoon of returning infantrymen assigned to help out with crowd control of the anti-war demonstrators in Washington, D.C. Shortly after I had been placed under his command, he came to the conclusion that I was more pro-demonstrator than pro-Army, so one night he took me aside for a little talk. As I waited for the lecture to begin he suddenly did the strangest thing -- he invited me to join his Bible study group.

"I'm afraid you're talking to the wrong person," I said, politely shaking my head no.

"But why?" he asked.

"Let's just say that God and I aren't on real good terms right now."

"Vietnam has done that to a lot of returning vets," he assured me. "Come on — give it a try — what do you have to lose?"

One thing led to another, and before I knew it, we were sitting on a park bench under the stars trying to make sense out of all the human suffering going on in the world in general, and Vietnam in particular. I didn't know the man from Adam, but I was immediately struck by how kind and compassionate he was.

"Have you ever read the Bible?" he asked me.

"Parts of it," I said.

"Well," he explained, "one of the major themes in the Bible is human suffering - and how important it is to God that each of us - while we're in this world - suffer."

"What?"

"I know that may sound a little strange," he said, "but the more a person suffers on this earth, the more special he or she is in God's eyes."

"Why is that?" I asked.

"Because suffering is one of the few things which can make us more compassionate, more sensitive, more charitable, more capable of loving others. In other words, it makes us more Christ-like - and in my way of thinking - more acceptable in the presence of God."

"You mean when you go to heaven?"

"Right - and the sooner we can pick up the qualities which suffering can give us, the sooner we can get off this earth and move on to bigger and better things."

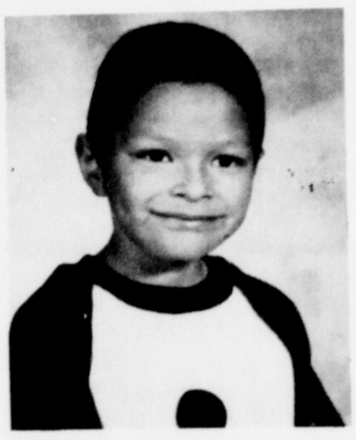

"So," I said, "you're saying that the guys who skate through life - the ones who don't do much suffering - the ones who get all the breaks - the ones who don't have to die young in a stupid war - the ones who seem to live forever without contributing anything to anyone - those aren't the lucky ones?"

"Exactly. In fact, if you aren't suffering in this world - and aware of all the other suffering going on all around you - then you're probably doing something wrong."

I never did get around to attending any of the second lieutenant's Bible study classes, but I've always been thankful for our little talk on that cold, clear winter night when I was stuck on the wrong coastplaying civilian soldier. It has often helped me try to put the unimaginable - like what's going on in Rwanda - into a perspective I can better understand.

I think C.S. Lewis may have said it best when he wrote, "Something must drive us out of our own self and into the world of others - and that something is suffering." Or, as Anthony Hopkins simply says in the last line of the movie "Shadowlands" - which is about the life of C.S. Lewis - "Pain is part of the happiness - that's the deal."

The Sports Insider

By Richard Novoa

Matt Williams was named National League Player of the Week for his .483 average, four doubles, four homers, ten runs, and 11 RBI. He now has 41 homers.

The N.L. record of 56 home runs was set by Hack Wilson in 1930. Roger Maris holds the Major League record of 61 set in 1961.

If the major baseball players can avoid a strike on Aug. 12, Matt is on pace to hit 62 homers.

The Giants still trail the Dodgers by one game, but with a strike possible, every game at this stage of the season is critical.

The A's lost Mark McGwire again to that left heel problem that has cost him another 15 days on the disabled list.

Rickey Henderson strained his right calf and Geronimo Berroa pulled his groin muscle, but with these injuries, Oakland remains in second place, only 2 1/2 games behind Texas.

Can you imagine playing 2,000 consecutive major league baseball games? That's what Baltimore's Cal Ripken accomplished this week. He's going after Lou Gehrig's record of 2,130 consecutive games! Cal has played in every single game for Baltimore since May 29, 1982. More than 12 years later, it's difficult to imagine any major league player could be closing in on a record once considered unbreakable.

The 49ers are gearing up for their first pre-season game on Friday, August 5 at 6:00 p.m. against the Arizona Cardinals. The Niners are in search of tight ends, since All-Pro Brent Jones re-injured his right ankle, which he broke in the Pro Bowl last February and Ted Popson left camp for treatment on a bulging disc in his lower back. The 49ers also have exhibition games Aug. 8 against San Diego and Aug. 26 against Seattle.

In local sports action, the Sacramento Knights (10-6), Gold Miners (3-1), Roller Hockey River Rats (3-12) and Giants (52-55) are all on the road, so you might want to drive to Oakland to catch the A's and Texas Rangers in their big weekend series!

See ya next week!

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial

Don't count your rice exports before they hatch

You just can't take those rice sales for granted:

Officials at the Port of Sacramento have known for some time that the secret to the Port's continued survival was diversification. After the Port's heyday in the '80s, Port officials have tried to expand the kinds of products they handle for export, while seeking ways to develop imports.

That way, a slump in the sales of one product -- such as rice or wood chips -- would not be devastating to the Port's finances, since another product could take up the slack.

This pursuit of diversification, though wise, has not been entirely successful, and the Port has been struggling to make ends meet during recent years.

But during the past few months, prospects at the Port have been buoyed by developments in Japan. That country had experienced terrible weather during the summer of 1993, which severely damaged its rice crop, and had agreed to purchase large amounts of rice from overseas -- from sources which included California farmers exporting through the Port of Sacramento.

Japan also agreed to begin open its near-sacred domestic rice market to U.S. competition, beginning with small percentages during the coming few years.

Now, there seems to be a difference of opinion on whether Japan has met the obligations it made when it negotiated the emergency short-term rice purchases, and the U.S. will find itself with 75,000 unsold metric tons of rice.

If, indeed, Japan has reneged on this agreement, the next question is obvious:

Will it honor its future commitments to begin importing American rice regularly? Or will it find a reason to back out, or scale down its future imports?

The answer will have a direct bearing on the viability of the Port.

Tidbit for the police car color scheme enthusiasts:

Originally, black-and-white was being discussed as the front runner to replace the colors on West Sacramento patrol cars.

Now, dark-blue-and white seems to have the edge, as Police Chief Larry Gore seeks ways to improve the department's morale and professionalism.

A business perspective on U.S. health care reform

from the National Federation of Independent Business

The following is a list of guiding principles which the majority of the 600,000 members of the National Federation of Indpendent Business believes any comprehensive health reform plan should follow. Taken together, we believe these measures will increase access to affordable health coverage and help to contain cost increases. While the list is not all-inclusive, it does represent the results of numerous surveys of small-business owners over the last several years.

Formation of health insurance purchasing groups should be encouraged. By joining together to purchase health insurance, small businesses and individuals can reduce costs through administrative savings and risk-sharing.

Self-employed business owners should be allowed a permanent 100% tax deduction for health insurance premiums purchased for their employees and themselves. Self-employed business owners such as sole proprietors, partnerships and S-corporations are allowed only a 24% deduction; that deduction is temporary and has currently expired. Expanding and making permanent the tax deductibility of premiums would enable many of the nearly five million uninsured self-employed to buy coverage for themselves and the millions they employ.

Insurance company practices should be reformed to make health insurance coverage easier and less expensive to buy. Being able to count on obtaining insurance with fairly stable premiums would enable more small business owners to purchase coverage for themselves and their employees. Specifically, any reforms in this arena should include elimination of the preexisting condition limitation, guaranteed access to policies, regardless of medical condition, and guaranteed renewal of policies.

Costly state benefit mandates and anti-managed care laws should be preempted. Enactment of certain state laws have significantly limited the availability of affordable health plans and discouraged the growth of managed care systems. State mandates alone can raise the cost of insurance 30 percent. Preempting these mandates and repealing restrictive state anti-managed care laws would allow small business owners easier access to affordable plans and greater access to cost-saving managed care arrangements.

A uniform, affordable standard benefits package should be developed in consultation with business, consumers, and state and local governments. However, regardless of who determines what is in a "basic standard benefits package," care must be taken to ensure that the plan is at a level necessary to assure adequate coverage and care but remains affordable. As such, we should consider the packages developed by the most efficient and cost-effective health maintenance organizations. Developing Fortune 500 type "benchmark" packages that are too generous will price them out of the reach of individuals and small business owners. It is imperative that the package be affordable to both employers and individuals.

Accountable health plans (AHPs) should compete to provide high quality, low cost coverage to purchasers of health care. In order to be successful, it is crucial that there always be multiple, truly competitive AHPs.

Attempts to control costs by imposing spending restraints or "global budgets" fail to address the root causes to the problem and should be avoided. Many have suggested the imposition of "global budgets" — caps on overall health care spending — in order to bring health expenditures under control. However, NFIB believes that global budgets are fundamentally unworkable (especially within a managed competition framework) and will lead to increased rationing of health care. Further, global budgets do not address the root causes of health care inflation, nor do they provide any incentives to increase efficiency in delivery of care.

Changing our medical malpractice laws. The current malpractice crisis only adds to the already astronomical cost of treatments, services, medical devices and pharmaceuticals, and inhibits research and development of new products. We belive that serious reform of the medical liability system can reduce the overuse of excessive and costly defensive medicine and save about $30 billion a year.

Implementing administrative and paperwork reforms. As much as one quarter of every health care dollar in the U.S. goes to paperwork and administrative costs. Economies of scale for small firms mean that more of their health care dollar — up to twice as much as large businesses - goes to coverpaperwork and adminstrative costs. As such, simplifying paperwork requirements and reducing administrative costs must be a part of any health care reform.

Consumer information and education is essential. NFIB strongly believes that informed consumers make more cost-conscious decisions relating to their health care. Currently, part of the reason that health care costs are going up so rapidly is due to the fact that consumers have lost their buying power in the health care market. Most Americans are shielded from the true costs of their insurance coverage and the cost of medical care, largely because the premiums are borne by employers. As a result, there is little or no incentive to search out the highest quality health product at the lowest cost, a theory fundamental in the purchasing of most other goods.

Letters to the Editor

Thank you

I wanted to take the time to express my heartfelt thanks to the West Sacramento Fire Department and the West Sacramento Police Department. Unfortunately, my first introduction to them on a personal level was their response to a 911 call on Thursday, July 14 at my home on Douglas Street.

My husband suffered a heart attack and they tried valiantly to revive him, but were unable to do so. I was not able to obtain the names of the Fire Department personnel, but they were very helpful and tried their best to reassure me as they did their job. I hope they know that I understand they did their very best, but it was out of their hands. Thanks to each of you.

I was able to obtain the name of the police officer who responded. He was Officer Able. He did his job with compassion and professionalism even though I was in a state of shock and had a hard time cooperating with him. Thank you, Officer Able, for understanding.

We are lucky to have such fine men and women to serve us and I wanted to take the time out to tell them. So often, we mean to write a good word and do not take the time to do it until it is too late.

Night Out Against Crime

About 20 people out of 100 residents showed up an anti-crime block party on Michigan Blvd. Tuesday evening. The group -- which socialized along a stretch of Michigan between Maple and Walnut Streets -- was one of at least six neighborhood areas to participate in the "National Night Out Against Crime," in which neighbors were urged to lock their doors, leave their porch lights on, and come out to socialize.

The crime dog "McGruff" paid a visit to the residents' groups. Locally, the event was sponsored by the West Sacramento Police Department.

Community Service Officer Lisa Cox, one of the event's organizers, said that the evening was intended to "build a better relationship between neigbhors. . which will build a better communication network between the neighbors and the police department.

"It really needs to be a partnership," she added.

Lt. Ron Moore of the West Sacramento Police Department echoed that sentiment.

"The significance of it is getting to know the people. Opening up communication will get them talking to us. That's what we need to catch the bad guys."

Resident Barbara Stalker, who participated in the Night Out, was asked if more people could be expected to become involved if such an event were held regularly.

"No," she responded. "You have the people who came, and the ones that didn't."

to buy all the rice made available to them by California growers.

The concerns raised in Fazio's resolution include estimates by the U.S. Department of Agriculture that an unanticipated 75,000 ton surplus of rice left on the U.S market will immediately cost the California rice industry $45 million dollars in lost revenues. The cost to the nation's rice industry due to depressed rice prices over the next two years is estimated to be $87 million.

The 60,000 tons of rice which would have been shipped through the Port of Sacramento would have been about ten shiploads, the loss of which represents about a quarter million dollars in lost revenues to the port, according to Port Director Mike Vernon.

A spokesperson for Fazio's office expressed the fear that if the United States allows the Japanese government to refuse to honor a relatively small contractual agreement of 75,000 tons of rice, then they might not honor the more significant long-term GATT agreement to open their markets to foreign trade.

The Japanese Food Agency acknowledges its commitment to the GATT agreement, and say they are currently working to make provisions to open the Japanese rice market. In the GATT treaty, according to information from the Japanese Food Agency, the Japanese have agreed that by 1995 at least four percent (379,000 metric tons) of their domestic rice consumption will be imported. By the year 2000, they have agreed to import at least eight percent (750,000 tons) of their rice.

Port Director Vernon said that he does not expect the Japanese to back out of their long-term GATT commitments because they are bound by a treaty. The port expects to ship at least half of Japan's 1995 rice imports.

by the neighborhood residents, and had the study completed by another firm.

The city decided to include large areas of undeveloped land in the redevelopment district, and to use the state redevelopment laws to try to attract large companies to build here.

Some of the local people involved in the original study felt that the community development needs had been discarded in favor of the drive to attract builders to the larger area.
